NOT YET NOMINATED.

If Harrison is not nominated on the first ballot that will be the end of him. His friends claim that already enough delegates are pledged to him to nominate him. His friends made that claim before any delegates were appointed.

We believe that when the Convention meets it will realize that the voice of a few machine politicians and conventions directed by Federal office holders, do not represent the voice of the people by any means.

The sober sense of the Convention will prevail, as it is easy to see that the nomination of Harrison, entangled as he is with Wall Street, will not be endorsed by the rank and file of the party.

To insure victory in November, a man who has the confidence of the people must head the ticket. During the campaign be was represented in the the West as being the friend of silver and Western interests. Since his election he has been the enemy of every Western idea; every Western ambition.

The Republican party must have a standard bearer representing the progressive ideas of the party...

McKinley has of late been suggested as being the apostle of protection.

He must be one who advocates protection of silver as well as wool and iron.

There must be no trifling with the West when the ticket is nominated at Minneapolis.

The strength of silver is growing every day. Recently a man in Massachusetts wrote to Teller of Colorado Wall Street.

vote for one.

MILBANK, THE DUELIST.

Henry Milbank, who is now posing as the surving principle of eighteen duels, is being loudly scored by the press and characatured by the comic artists.

He has killed some seven or eight men and ready to defend his honor by assisting in the demise of more. Such a man is reckoned brave, but admitting this to be a fact, it is a sort of bravery that the world has little use for. The New York reporter who went and investigated cases of yellow fever on a quarantined island, and paid the penalty with his life, showed more bravery than Milbank in all his duels.

Milbank would never have risked his life in that way. The big duelists all take water when they think their lives are in real danger. Even the fiery Cassignac refused to meet a man whom he knew was a dead shot.

A man in San Francisco who had killed his man in a duel in South America once said to the writer:

"I was justified in my act by everybody, yet I have suffered such remorse of spirit in consequence, that I would rather be called a coward all GEM my life than again fight a duel.] have wished a thousand times that I had been killed instead of my adversary."

The recent encounters growing out of the Drayton scandal has made dueling ridiculous in two hemispheres.

Mrs Pierre Lorellard wife of a successful tobacco packer in New York has opened war on Mrs. Coleman Drayton because of her entanglements with Burrows, by refusing to hire a servant recommended by Mrs. Drayton. This is merely the act of a narrow minded, spiteful woman, who is making a very large exhibition of a very small mind. Meanwhile the Astors are bringing all their wealth and prestage to bear to force society to recognize Mrs. Drayton. They will probably succeed, as a woman with several hundred millions at her back can get into any society in America, if she makes up her mind to. The notoriety of the last few weeks however would have such an effect upon most wemen that they would not consider the fight for lost social status as worth the candle, when the snubs and humiliations, incidental to such a contest, are considered. Regarding the outcome of the row, the public take but very little interest.

It will not pay in the long run for any newspaper in Curson to make fun of the silver movement.
